Subject: Use of Boundaries Are Allowed as a Formation Resource

To Whom It May Concern,

After review, we recognize Boundaries Are Allowed as a formation resource that supports safeguarding culture, appropriate boundaries, and adult responsibility within child-serving environments.

These materials present clear, age-appropriate language regarding boundaries and care, while maintaining a clear distinction between formation, policy, and legal compliance. They do not replace safeguarding policies, mandatory reporting obligations, or professional training, but may be used alongside such measures to support prevention and shared understanding.

We affirm that responsibility for appropriate conduct rests with adults, and we recognize the value of resources that reinforce clarity, visibility, and accountability in environments involving children.

Use of these materials should always be guided by existing safeguarding policies, applicable civil law, and denominational or organizational requirements.

Sincerely,
